

Stargazing: Leonids Meteor Shower

written by John Mueller | September 24, 2021

The Leonids is a meteor shower that produces around 15 meteors per hour, but can be intense as these meteors can fall at rates as high as 50,000 per hour (source: space.com).

Note: A full moon might be in the sky these nights, which might detract from viewing the meteors.